

103045

San Jose, California, it's helicopter service for a flagpole sitter as a mild and merry midsummer madness settles upon the nation. "Ozzie" Osborne is celebrating his birthday atop his dizzy, eighty-foot perch - and he's also passing his own world flagpole sitting record of fifty-two days, thirteen hours and fifty-eight minutes. To celebrate the occasion, a helicopter, piloted by a young admirer, Eugenia Diehl, brings him presents, including a lovely birthday cake. It also threatens to give him a haircut.

Another admirer stands anxiously by, just in case "Ozzie" doesn't like his cake. But "Ozzie" seems to like it so well that maybe he'll hang around until his next birthday.

103045
It's bad enough to have bats in the belfry - but when you've got trains running around your head, that's really something to worry about. This "Wheels A Rolling" model was shown in Chicago. Clear the tracks, here comes the limited!!!

Men. prepare for a shock. In Turin, Italy, the worst has happened. At a local style show, hairdressers from all over Italy were allowed to do just what they pleased. And look what happened! The hairdressers work feverishly to wreak their terrible revenge.

This creation is called the fountain.

These days you can never tell what a lady is apt to have on her mind.

SPORTS (3)

The Hell Drivers speed up the demolition with a high dive into a nest of highway has-beens.

They've got some jallopies left, so here they go again - a steel-splitting encore for the crackup champions!

That driving hazard - the ancient jallopy - meets a harrowing end at the hands of the Hell Drivers. Aided by two tons of ice, this crackup champion obeys the first rule of the road - Keep cool!

The human battering ram lives up to his name in the "Circus of Thrills" staged at San Francisco's Bayshore Stadium. The crowd gasps as the stunts get progressively more thrilling and more dangerous.