

THEY FOLLOWED "THE FEW."

In Passberg in the British zone of Germany, a remembrance parade honours the 70 airmen killed in action in the cold war. Heroes of the gigantic airlift, they proved themselves worthy successors to "The Few." British, French and American Air Commanders take the salute as the Western Allies pause to remember.

Because of the airlift, a city stayed free. Two million lives were preserved. Democracy won through.
