

PATERSON A GAME LOSER

Pathe sports cameras go to Hampden Park to tell the full story of an idolized boxer's battle to come-back. Scotland's Jackie Paterson - wearing the white stripe on his trunks - has picked a tough opponent for his return to the ring - Mexico's swarthy Manuel Ortiz - bantam-weight champion of the world. Yet Jackie - who lost his world crown just over a year ago - shows that though he has lost a little of his old speed, he has lost none of his courage. The Scottish boy uses the ring to his advantage and, by smart manoeuvring, escapes several of the Mexican's lethal punches.

Warming up slowly in the bitterly cold night, the wily Ortiz bides his time until round seven, when he goes all out to put Paterson down for nine.

A game Paterson comes up fighting and the battle's speed is hotting up!

The Mexican is now at his best and not even Paterson's pluck can save him from another count.

Though Ortiz is an undisputed champion, Paterson shows that he is a champion of courage.
