

OUTDOORS COMES INDOORS.

The Glasshouse takes on a new meaning in California. Friends of architect Philip Johnson can always tell what's cooking in his kitchen - for the outer walls of his modernistic house near Los Angeles are made entirely of glass. Dinner at the Johnsons' is just like a picnic in the open - without any of the inconveniences.

The only room with an opaque wall is the bathroom. For bringing the outdoors indoors - architect Johnson deserves credit - and a special round of applause from the glaziers union!
