She's listed but the damage is all in one compartment forward and I think the navy ought to make a good job of it.

14. C.U. Mr. Alf Russell answering questions:

Q: Well Mr. Russell, what did you find when you first went down?

A: Well, I landed on the bow of the submarine right by the ? and wedged meself in there. There was still a strong current running, and scounded the hull there with me boots, and after a while I managed to crawl to the top of the submarine and crawled along the deck. Again, I scounded with my boots, laying down with my helmet to the deck. Couldn't hear nothing, then started feeling around with my hands gradually working from midship to the conning tower, feeling all the time and tapping with me boots but of course there was no answer and after quite a while I went to the surface and reported to our inspector. I was in touch all the time by telephone. Went down again, put another rope on. Had ahothor short survey round the gun pit, or where I thought was the gun pit and tapped again with my boots keeping in touch all the time on the telephone and sending up different bits of information and when I'd just about had enough, I went up and Tom went down.

A: Well, I was the first one to get down. I was the first one to discover.....
