SCOTS DOG WINS IRISH KENNEL SHOW

Two Irish wolf hounds lead the parade at Ballsbridge, where the Irish kennel club puts on its annual championship. Alsatians are much in favour among the near 3,000 entries, but most popular with both onlookers and exhibitors are Golden Spaniels. Among sporting breeds, Dublin owners win prizes with these magnificent Bernois.

Best in the show is a Scottish terrier from Lancashire - but it is other smaller classes that steal the show. The Dachshund prize once again goes to a Dublin owner.

This lone threesome of Australian terriers from Yorkshire also earn honours. Much-admired, too, is a superb St. Bernard, a prize-winner all the way. It's the dog world's "show of the year" and Dublin knows just how to stage it.
