

PRINCESS MARGARET AT RAMSGATE

Touring Ramsgate's Newington Housing Estate, Princess Margaret stops for a word with a group of excited young Brownies. After giving a new Avenue her own name and planting a tree to mark the site of the thousandth house, Her Royal Highness inspects an aluminium bungalow on the Estate.

For Ramsgate it's a gala day. After a civic lunch Princess Margaret is received by a guard-of-honour of the Royal West Kents when she arrives to visit the General Hospital.

Next there's a guard-of-honour of nurses. Princess Margaret's public life becomes busier every day as she takes over duties from her Royal sister. A visit to the children's ward makes a welcome relief, perhaps, from some of the more formal occasions. And to a youngster languishing in bed a visit from a real Princess is a tonic.
