Cuzco, one-time Golden Capital of the Incas, clears up after a devastating earthquake. In a few seconds, buildings which had stood for centuries were tumbled into the streets. Fifty people were killed, hundreds injured. Oldest city in the Americas, Cuzco has been ravaged many times in its turbulent history. Now nature does her bit ... but for the fact that a third of the people were at a soccer match, casualties might have been very much higher.

The Wolseley Voiturette makes a come-back 50 years after. To be precise, she's 51 years old and was found enjoying a well-earned rest in a forgotten corner. When they'd got her tidied up a bit she began to give them ideas. In her youth she'd been a bit of a goer: could she do it again? George Dono churned her up and three-and-a-half horses stampeded. John Nixon thought she'd do it: he saw her in the 1899 trial. Even she couldn't shake his faith in her! And that's the end of the funny part, because she did the trip. For the record, she's single-cylindered, with belt and chain drive. We still count on the same fine craftsmanship to build fine cars.
