

IN CAPTAIN COOK'S FOOTSTEPSWHITBY

From Whitby sailed the man who discovered Australia, and now here's "Miss Australia" discovering Whitby two-hundred-years later. The Jolly Roger inscription has more than passing interest for 19-year-old Margaret Hughes, for pirates menaced the freedom of the seas when Captain Cook discovered her homeland. In this little house in Grape Lane are treasured all that are left of the simple possessions of a great sailor. In the tiny fishing village of Staithes, nearby, Captain Cook grew to manhood. It's nice when a daughter of his new-found continent comes twelve-thousand miles just to say "Thanks!"

SOUTHAMPTON

From Southampton the liner "New Australia" prepares to embark fifteen-hundred emigrants for the land of the Southern cross. A young, virile land awaits them.

Formerly the "Monarch of Bermuda," the new liner will make four round trips a year. More than eighty-six thousand have sailed for "Down Under" since the war. They needed courage to make their decision. But their new land needs them too. So - "Bon Voyage," "New Australia."
