

COMMANDOS FOR KOREA

The Royals answer the call! They're off by air to Korea. Within 24 hours volunteers were more than enough to complete the number needed. Now they're ready. In charge of the small force is Lieutenant Colonel Brysdale - jungle war veteran of Burma.

Royal Marine training and discipline is proverbial. But the Green Berets the Royal Marine Commandos - really go through it. Fully trained, they're hard as steel, with nerves of ice. Look! No hands!

Dory Drill (that's jumping from a rocking platform) trains them to jump from boats.

When you reach the top, the instructor changes his mind.

This is something really tough. Halfway across they practice falling over and recovering.

Specialists, all "operation successful - patients all dead" is their usual report.
