

THE BATTLE FOR POHANG

Superforts carry the attack on supplies to only 60 miles from the Russian border as bombs burst on Chengjin factories. This was the Allied strategy that slowly but surely beat Germany. In recaptured Pohang, South Korean troops find abandoned stores that'll soon be hard to replace. Now the Reds are again attacking Pohang and Pusan to cut supplies and encircle the G.I.s. In the battle of supplies, prisoners already report shortages, but the United Nations troops are now well-equipped and supplies are plentiful.

Behind the lines tanks load up. There are many tanks now. The time bought by the first few men has not been wasted. Then begins the move up the road to the front....the loneliest road in the world.

Now guns of the United Nations roar along the whole front.

Somewhere in Korea our men will soon be in action. And the guns will be there with them. But the United Nations must win the battle of supplies, despite outside aid. And to win they must hold Pusan and Pohang.
