

TAPESTRY FOR THE QUEEN

In the old Dovecot tower near Edinburgh, history is made - history with a happy domestic touch - when the Queen and Princess Margaret cut a tapestry from the loom. Using a Skein Dhu, which proves to be none too sharp, Her Majesty becomes the first Queen to cut through the tough strandsen which a Scottish tapestry is woven. It's the finishing touch to work which has taken four years to complete. Woven into the design is a four-leafed clover to bring all good luck to Bony Prince Charles.
