

LONDON

FOUR GIRLS IN A HURRY

It's all excitement at Westminster Hospital, where four young girls have arrived two months before they were expected. Among those present is the father, Mr. Coles, a maintenance engineer. In future he'll have four more to maintain. The Coles Quads, aged 24 hours, and each in its own brand-new incubator. The hospital had only two hours warning but the young guests have no complaints about their reception. They'll be staying for a month or so. The incubators in which Maria, Patricia, Frances and Edna live are kept under close watch.

There seems to be quite a world epidemic of quads these days. As a matter of fact the odds are 600-thousand to one. And here at last is the proud mother, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Coles. She'll have to brush up her four-times table - everything will be that way in future.