KENNY BEATS MACHTELINEK

Georges Carpentier climbs through the ropes once again to meet Ted 'Kid' Lewis, his old time opponent. When they met for business, Georges knocked out Lewis in the first round, surprising him after a 'break.' Tonight he comes to give a send-off to the Kid's testimonial show, where Scottish champion Jim Kenny meets Jean Machteleinek, champion of Belgium over 8 rounds on the opening night of the Braitman-and-Kara season at the Express Hall. It's Kenny's first fight in London (you can spot him by the monogram on his pants) and he's up against a clever two-handed fighter.

The Belgian gets Kenny on the ropes, and with the Scot all tangled up, scores heavily before the ref. steps in to the rescue.

It's a fast and furious bout with both boys going all out. If they keep this up they'll both know they've been in a fight.

The Belgian seems to be getting the measure of Kenny - or maybe the Scot's tiring: it's the last round and there can't be much in it either way.

And there goes the gong for the end of the fight.

Kenny's the winner! But the ref's decision gets a mixed reception. Wonder what Carpentier thinks? Anyway, it was a good fast fight. Nice work, boys! And whilst we're talking boxing, here's a face that ought to be familiar - Tommy Farr, the Welshman who put British boxing right at the top when he made Joe Louis's crown wobble. Tommy is training for his come-back fight with Jan Klein of Holland at Pontypridd on Wednesday the 27th. Finest British fighter of his time, if Tommy's back in the old fern, Wales may soon have another crack at the title.
