DUSSELDORF

BRITISH FOIL COMMUNIST PLAN

The new Communist Headquarters in West Germany (opened only six weeks ago) are decked with "Tommy Go Home" and other anti-British slogans as security police and the Dusseldorf Police Commissioner arrive to take over. A 48-hour requisition notice has been ignored, so direct action is taken. From here the Reds were organising the banned march on nearby Dortmund and demonstrating in the Ruhr.

From the 130 offices nearly 500 Communists are turned out, but apart from shouting and chanting slogans there's no trouble. The building was requisitioned as the quickest way to break up a danger centre. With swift German action in other centres the threatened weekend trouble fizzled out. Only prompt, firm action can cope with the world's greatest menace - Communism.
