

NEWS IN FLASHES

Outside Clarence House they wait to cheer a certain important young gentleman on the occasion of his second birthday. And there he goes, Prince Charles of Edinburgh, 2-years-old today and on his way home for the party, god bless him!

A bulldog never looks cowed, does it? But at the London Bulldog Society show one certainly looks sheepish. There's a children's fancy dress parade. Not quite the thing for such a dignified dog, but they'll do anything for kiddies. As experts bulldogs have earned over 50-thousand dollars for Britain. As far as overseas people are concerned, he's still British and Best!

Risks introduces Transformettes - this is the Medici. They suit one style of hair-do to many occasions. You can go skiing straight from the most formal affair by just "slipping on" the Alpine Sport - as well as the ice.

Here Lady in Mink approaches Monkey Nut. Transformettes may be a fine new idea for the modern woman, but this one certainly has whiskers on it!

The "Daily Express" 1,000 miles Rally, largest ever held in Britain, ends with owners restoring some of the spit-and-polish. They're now competing for the Concours d'elegance, or "How do I look?" competition. Centre of interest is the little home-made Haselear soon to be put into production. And there's a London taxi in the thick of it as usual.

Judges have a tough job if everybody's to have an equal chance. But you've got to have everything in place to stand a chance. It's not enough just to look the nicest car there.
