

BRITISH TOYS LEAD WORLD

Harrogate's Toy Fair brings buyers from all over the world with a million pounds to spend and the most exacting customers to please - the kiddies. The samples alone are valued at more than £100,000. Any similarity here to British Railways is purely co-incidental.

Battery-operated toys are bound to attract attention; and dolls these days are so realistic that a man's got to be awfully careful to make sure he isn't walking out with the wrong young lady.
