

SOUTHPORTTRYING OUT DARWIN?

Mrs. Doris Culshaw is making an experiment with her baby chimp Pete which may give scientists a lot of useful knowledge. In her family circle Pete, who lost his mother when he was very young, is being brought up like a human baby. It's not just a stunt. Mrs. Culshaw has kept monkeys for 15 years and she's interested to find out how near to human behaviour a baby chimp will grow.

Pete wears nappies like an ordinary baby and doesn't mind because he's never known different. Secret of the test is that he must be brought up just like a human.

Mrs. Culshaw is an experienced midwife and knows all about bringing up babies. Already Pete shows surprising results. This is a serious test, not just a case of making a monkey of a chimp!
