

KING JOHN STARTED IT

It's up with the barricades for the annual street football game. And there's Tommy Lawton ready to kick off: it's safer up there. King John, the gentleman who lost his things in the Wash, founded the game. To get rid of a crowd he tossed them a bag of gold. Now they make do with a bag of wind.

Over the top to victory - with a lovely pair of miners' boots to help. The bobby thinks he's gone too far and goes to the rescue. The ambulance can't get through so they call the Fire Brigade. But there he is, safely out of it. That'll be all for him. Oh!

Look out! Here comes a real rush of business!

From three till five anything goes. To win you've got to hang onto it till five, Mister!
