"TWO TON" TONY V. JACK DOYLE

At Harringay Arena, "Two Ton" Tony Galento of America meets Jack Doyle over 20 rounds in a World Heavyweight Championship eliminator. Galento, shorter and hairier of the two, gets in some good knee-work, but the ref. don't like it - and nor does Jack for that matter. This noble art is known as the Modern International catch-as-catch can wrestling but judging strictly from appearances it looks as though bash-as-bash-can would be better!

Some years back Tony fought Joe Louis - without rocking Joe's crown - so if Jack wants to box, we box! Galento's training schedule outside the ring is beer, stew and steak.

Now twist!

Round five. And the Boy from the Bronx didn't like that toe-twisting business. "I'll molder the bum," says he, as he did in the broadcast.

Doyle's doing nothing; Tony's bewildered; and the ref. announces Doyle has retired with a broken rib; and that's all there is of that, folks.
