

PRINCESS MARGARET IN N. WALES

Received by the Lord Lieutenant of Carnarvonshire and Mrs. Wynne-Finch on her visit to North Wales, Princess Margaret finds a warm welcome in the little town of Deganwy.

There's snow on the distant mountains as the Princess sets out for a visit to Conway Castle.

In the shadow of the nearly 700-years-old Castle built by Edward the First, eleven-year-old Heather Jones has her own big moment with the Princess. Later there were 12 other Joneses amongst those presented to Her Royal Highness by the Mayor and Constable of the Castle, Alderman Bennett Hughes.

It was the Princess's first visit to North Wales and the only regrets were that her tour, which included Llandudno and Penmaenmawr, was limited to one day.
