

BOURNEMOUTH

C.E.A. MEMBERS GET TOGETHER

Look out, Bournemouth! You may not know it, but there's an invasion on! Everything may be 'Happy Go Lively' at the Westover, but 750 strangers are at headquarters, the Royal Bath Hotel, and other places, because the C.E.A. is in conference at the Town Hall. And just to prove there was a conference, here are some of the delegates arriving. If we start naming them, this will turn into a catalogue, friends, so see if you can spot yourselves.

And here we are in session. There's a big programme on and everybody knows what it's all about. But it's very hard to convince some people that business is ever done at any conference, so let's have the official statement from the top ... And here's calling the gentleman who's fast becoming quite a film star, your Chairman, Councillor H.P.H. Mears.

Well, he did say there might be time off, and here we are with Danny Kaye and Ben Lyon at the Parkstone golf club.

Tarsan Lex Barker and wife Arlene Dahl are at Meyrick Park Bowling Green for the bowls tournament. We ought to see something new; but Arlene's such a picture that nobody's keeping his eye on the ball.

But bowls is a serious game, so let's watch some of the experts, and - just in case - let's stick to 'no names, no pack drill.'

Back at the Parkstone Club peace has returned with the temporary departure of Mr. Kaye: he'll be back later with Ben Lyon. Meantime, they're getting on with the serious business of the tournament.

We loose an awful lot of cameramen that way. There's one thing about all this - it's entertainment without tax! And that's a good cue for a vote of thanks to those who organized the conference: it's a big job to look after 750 people and keep them all happy.

Uh-huh! Don't look now, but that character's coming back with Ben Lyon!
