

GORDON RICHARDS HELPS OLD HORSES

Near Lingfield in Surrey is Cherry Tree Farm. But it's not a farm as you and I think of farms. Cherry Tree Farm is a place where horses who have served man well and suffered in their service can rest and enjoy the attention they so badly need. Even the food to keep them working some of them lacked. Now comes the most famous horseman of our days - Gordon Richards - to open a new wing to care for more of these our faithful servants, and to remind us of the work Cherry Tree Farm does.

Freddie was Gordon's rival for the jockey's championship in his day. A great horseman, he was killed in a car crash.

At Cherry Tree the International League for the Protection of Horses has 21 guests, three of them donkeys. Pictures like these say more for the work of the League than can any words.
