

"SUGAR" RAY V. WALZACK

At Liege, Sugar Ray Robinson, due soon to defend his world middleweight title against Randolph Turpin, tackles Jean Walsack of France - and just look at the speed of those blows. Walsack fights back, but there's no answer when "Sugar Ray" starts punching.

Walsack sails in, and Robinson steps back. The Frenchman sends over a wild left. Robinson avoids. Walsack follows, but a hard right to stomach and - whoosh - did you see that uppercut!

The Frenchman is game but he's no match for the greatest fighting-machine of the day. And Sugar Ray is really fighting now.

Round Six. Walsack is greggy now, ripe for the kill. A right ... and a left ... and a left to the chin and Walsack is down again.

Walsack is a demon for punishment. Now Robinson is fairly going all out.

The Ref's stopped the fight! Walsack's taken plenty and Sugar Ray Robinson wins on a technical knock-out. And pretty good technique, too, Sugar!
