Oil mission off to Persia

As the British oil mission to Persia arrives at Heathrow, pressmen besiege the Lord Privy Seal, Mr. Richard Stokes, head of the mission, for some famous last words. It's a tough problem Mr. Stokes is tackling in Persia, the results vital to both countries, so it's good to know that he starts out with reasonably good hopes.

Good luck, Mr. Stokes.

Windsors on holiday

From the yacht Sister Anne, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor land at Portofino to begin a holiday on the Italian Riviera. Once central figures in one of the greatest dramas of our times, they're still big news wherever they go

And just where are they going? The cameraman follows! The car pulls up - it's only the Rapallo golf course, but there's a good picture for his trouble.

Nuremberg: Ascari wins Grand Prix

At the Nuremberg Ring crack drivers get away to the start of the German Grand Prix. It's 280 miles over a winding, twisting course specially designed for high speed and thrills. In the field are last year's winner, Alberto Ascari in a Ferrari, and the Argentine crack Fangio in an Alfa-Romeo.

Well, it was the right spirit anyway even if it did go in the wrong place!

At the finish it's Ascari closely followed by Fangio.

A bit big for the mantelpiece, Alberto.
