

51/67

HIROSHIMA - 6 YEARS AFTER

This was Hiroshima six years ago in the wake of the first atom bomb. Out of the first atom bomb's ashes there rises a new city. Here, where a hundred-thousand died on that day when the world first learned of the new terror which threatened mankind, another bomber drops a wreath of flowers, whilst the peace bell calls the town to silent memory.

Throughout the day survivors pay tribute to those who perished. For the very young, this is a day of awe beyond their understanding. To them Hiroshima is but the name of their bright new town. And so whilst the old remember the horror that was yesterday, the young live for today. But let mankind be careful lest he bury the lesson of Hiroshima with the scars of the old.