

LABOUR PLANS THE CAMPAIGN

Scarborough sees the big guns open up in the election campaign as the Labour Party assembles for its 50th annual conference. The Socialist election manifesto is the only subject on the agenda.

The National Executive vote gives the rebels sensational success, but for the time being Aneurin Bevan and Mr. Attlee have agreed to bury the hatchet - away from home. And here's the party secretary Morgan Phillips, followed by the Prime Minister. The conference is assembled under its chairman, Miss Alice Bacon.

Observing strict political neutrality, Pathe News will report in our next issues the Conservative and Liberal Election appeals by their respective leaders. Here is Mr. Attlee:

~~But when it is said and done,~~ The crucial question of this election, on which every elector must make up his or her mind, is this, what kind of Society we want. We want a society of free men and women, free from poverty, free from fear, able to develop to a full, the faculties in co-operation with the fellows. Everyone, giving and having the opportunity to give service to the community, everyone regarding his own private income in the light of the interest of others, in the light of the interest of the community. A society bound together by rights, their obligation rights bringing obligations, obligations fulfilled bringing rights, a Society free from gross inequalities, and yet not regimented, not uniformed.

Let's go forward into this fight in the spirit of William Blake
'I will not cease from mental strife, nor shall the sword sleep in my hand, Till we have built Jerusalem, in England's green and pleasant land.'
