M.V. Chairman, fellow delegates, comrades, may I thank you for that very kind and generous welcome. My duty this afternoon is to introduce to you the Labour Party manifesto for the Election of 1951. We shall discuss it during the next few days, and others of my...

54ft.

S.C.U. ...this manifesto, by seeing that we are proud of our record. We have nothing to apologise for, and we go into this election full of confidence. Now it doesn't seem a long time ago since the 1950 Election. That election 46ft.

L.V. ...and peace is not just a liberty, peace means that you get rid, as far as you can, of the causes of war. Now we have taken our stand through very many years, through good or ill on support for the sale of war. Another great Foreign Secretary of ours, Arthur Henderson, laid down the lines on which we have acted.

48ft.

S.V. For it is the common factor of our opponents to try and run down Britain in the eyes of the world, but unless we have lost our interests quite untrue, we hold a unique place in the world and our geographical position we are a vital link between Europe and the new world. From our position as a leading member of the Commonwealth, we bring together nations of all the continents and in particular we unite in greater association the nation of Asia as well as of Europe

S.V. We have been forced by their attitude to build up a great but meanwhile we must try and follow out the policy of fair shares as a result of my visit to Washington last December we have been trying to deal with raw materials on an international basis to try and get fair shares at home 35ft.

M.V. and we continue year by year the policy of re-dressing in equality of both. The policy of getting a greater distribution of well being. When I look back on these six and a half years they make one of the most striking things. Only a few years ago.. 42ft.

S.C.U. As I said, the right of our progress is contained by circumstances. We, as a government, are always faced with multitudinous demands, all desirable in themselves. They are pressed by different groups of people, and of course there should be this enthusiasm. For the task of a Government should be to make a decision on priorities, as to when you can do this, when you can do the other, it is not an easy choice, ~~xxxxxxxxxxxx~~ You can see some set out in our paper. Is that problem of equal pay. We want to do it, we have to find the time when we can do it. On these things we must be conditioned by circumstances. We must make decisions on priority. (Lens change). But when all is said and done, the crucial question of this election, on which every elector must make up his or her mind, is this, what kind of Society we want. We want a Society of free men and women, free from poverty, free from fear, able to develop to a full, the faculties in co-operation with the fellows. Everyone, giving and having the opportunity to give service to the community, everyone regarding his own private income in the light of the interest of others, in the light of the interest of the community. A society bound together by rights, their obligation rights bringing obligations, obligations fulfilled bringing rights, a Society free from gross inequalities, and yet not regimented, not uniformed. 240ft.

L.V. Let's go forward into this fight in the spirit of William Blake

"I will not cease from mental strife, nor shall the sword sleep in my hand Till we have built Jerusalem, in England's green and pleasant land."

(Applause).
