

BLANDFORD WEDDING

To St. Margaret's, Westminster, for the biggest society wedding of the year. With the guests come bridesmaids in cream with gold sashes, and there's a guard of honour of the Lifeguards, the green's regiment. Mr. Churchill attends as a member of the family.

Pages wear the red and gold Lifeguards uniform of Marlborough's time. Now there's a stir as word passes, Here comes the Bride! Miss Susan Hornby, in ivory satin, is with her father, but there seems to be some doubt as to who should carry her train.

It's a forty-five minutes service, but now here they come - the Marquis of Blandford, 25-year-old heir of the Duke of Marlborough, and his new Marchioness, who is 22 today.

The bride pauses for a word with best man Billy Wallace, whilst nearby Princess Margaret watches with the Queen as the curtain falls on another brilliant London occasion.
