COMMAND FILM SHOW

In London the Queen and Princess Margaret arrive for the Royal Command Film Performance, in aid of trade Charities. The Queen wears shell pink and gold lace, Princess Margaret white satin and the Duchess of Kent white lace.

After speaking to the stars of the British film chosen for the show, Her Majesty meets Fred Mac Murray, one of the American stars who have come over to help tonight.

For Jane Russell - in crimson-velvet - it's the biggest thrill of her life. She's to sing in the stage show.

Lizbeth Scott - known as "the Threat" - chooses ice-blue. She will help Orson Welles with conjuring tricks, as one and all combine to conjure up £24,000 for the film trade benevolent fund. But above all, to Her Majesty go our thanks for the outstanding success of a brilliant evening.
