ROYAL TOUR NEARS END

Snatching a brief holiday in New Brunswick before the final stage of their tour, Princess Elizabeth and the Duke make their only public appearance to attend service at Trinity Church, St. Agathe. They've been waddling 60 miles further north in the Laurentians, where they made a snow Winsten. During the service the Duke read the lesson.

Even in the lonely countryside Canadians come from miles around to see their Royal visitors, who (like any other couple, with husband at the wheel), go home from church.
