

SCOTLAND v. WALES

At Hampden Park, Wales (in light shirts, striped shorts) surprised Scotland by snatching a one-goal victory in the last minute of the match. At first Scotland had most of the play but Shortt in goal played a really great game.

But within seven minutes Shortt fouled Reilly and Scots supporters looked for a penalty goal - but Orr's kick hit the upright and Wales breathed again. Then gradually Wales get into their stride.

Wally Barnes sets a Welsh attack going.

From the corner kick Foulkes shoots but it's saved and at half-time there was still no score.

Here's an exciting moment in front of the Welsh goal as Waddell centres.

Then in the last minute, with still no score, over came a centre and Allchurch headed in to snatch victory for Wales. Scotland had their chances but Wales never gave up and just deserved to win.
