

BRITAIN'S NEW FIGHTER

Introducing the De Havilland one-one-oh, Britain's new day-and-night fighter, and test-pilot "Cats-Eyes" Cunningham, night-fighter ace. Powered by two Rolls Royce-jet engines, she's designed to intercept jet bombers at speeds which call for every aid science can give her navigator, so Cunningham's off again for another test. First flown less than two months ago, the new fighter is still only an infant. There maybe a few teething troubles yet.

In the light of the setting sun the one-one-oh looks menacing. If she's as good as she looks, Britain will have something extra special for any unwelcome aerial visitor.