

LAST DAYS AT OSLO

At Holmenkollen, King Haakon of Norway comes to see the finals of the Olympic ski-jump competition. And here goes Ostman of Sweden.

All you have to do is slide, glide and - stay on your feet if you can.

Prince Olaf watches as Bergmann makes his winning jump to give Norway her seventh Gold Medal in the Games.

Now it's the American four-man bob team preparing for a real crack at the Germans in the final. There's only a matter of seconds in it.

Everybody seems pleased with the run, but here come the Germans to win by just over $2\frac{1}{2}$ seconds on the aggregate for three runs.
