

SCOTLAND WIN AMATEUR MATCH AT WEMBLEY

Meeting England in the first amateur international held at Wembley - with a 50,000-crowd watching, Scotland kick off. England - who play in white - have had a run of fifteen amateur internationals without defeat since Scotland won in 1949. Scotland attack... the ball goes out to Murray (who is one of seven from Queens Park playing in the Scottish team) but Charlton is there covering him. There's a tangle with team-mate Grierson till Charlton intercepts and clears. At the other end Ritchie stops a nasty one.

From the clearance Scotland get going ... Murray fools Charlton ... he'll score here! Yes, it's a goal for Scotland.

Half-time Scotland one, England nil, and Scotland turn on the pressure with the resumption ... what's it matter how you save 'em?

The England forwards who scored eight against Kire a week ago can't get going ... here's Robb on the wing. He beats Paterson. Hastie dashes to the rescue but Robb gets clear and centres.

Now Scotland attack again. Grierson gets a chance and beats Brown to put Scotland two up.

At last England get going. A grand run by Robb gives Noble his chance to reduce the odds, but Scotland win by two goals to one.
