ROYAL OCCASIONS

The Gloucester Regiment parade in Gloucester, for the Colonel-in-Chief's inspection. It's the 1st battalion and among them are some of those who won the United States President's citation at the Imjin River. The men who wear badges back and front of their headgear are now known as the Gallant Gloucesters.

Now, on behalf of the Queen, the Duke of Gloucester presents new colours, and then the four guards of three officers and seventy-six men (escorting their new colours) march off.

Windsor

In the Quadrangle of Windsor Castle, Her Majesty the Queen arrives to attend a parade inaugurated in her grandfather's time. With her is the Duke of Edinburgh. Many of the scouts come from overseas to attend this 13th Windsor parade. For each of a number of disabled scouts the Queen had a special word. Except during the war, the ceremony has always been held on the nearest Sunday to St. George's Day. The parade concludes with a march-past.
