

THE QUEEN AT B.I. FAIR

At Olympia, the Queen with the Duke sees some of the latest products of Britain's master craftsmen, such as the delicate work of this glass-worker. Also in the royal party are the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester and their two sons. Even more interesting than the £580 gold tea service is the model of the Coronation Chair. Just arrived by "Comet" from South Africa, Sir Miles Thomas tells Her Majesty some of the wonders of that British machine which has made the flying world sit up and take notice. After a two hours visit, the Queen paid a warm tribute to all. We'll reap the benefits of the show next year - Coronation Year.

St. James's

And at St. James's Palace the Coronation Commission assembles for its first meeting. Lord Jowett arrives with Mr. Attlee. Next Lord Woolton. The Commission of thirty-seven (this is Earl Alexander) includes representatives of our great Commonwealth partners. The Premier is also a member of the Commission. Chairman is the Duke of Edinburgh who is greeted by his deputy, the Duke of Norfolk, who as Earl Marshal plans such great occasions.
