DANISH KING AT CANTERBURY

At Canterbury Cathedral they gather to welcome a foreign King and Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the Dean, receives King Frederick of Denmark. As Colonel-in-Chief of the Buffs, King Frederick is to unveil a memorial window to the dead of this East Kent Regiment.

To those who died in the Buffs (including Danish brothers-in-arms) and the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada.

At a parade at the New Infantry Barracks, King Frederick inspects a regiment whose link with his country goes back to the days of Queen Anne. Among them is a detachment of cadets.

Prince Georg of Denmark is with the King who presents Danish orders. Long ago the Danes used to raid us. Today we welcome them among our best friends. Associations such as this make the link closer and more real.
