SPORT

The water-beetles get buzzing at Burton-on-Trent at a festival in aid of Sea Cadets. It's a good way to keep cool: - anyway, if you don't keep cool you can easily go for a Burton at this lark.

Water skiing now - in a programme full of thrills for 20-thousand boiling holiday-makers who'd give a lot for some of that spray!

Don't try this way with detachable dentures.

HENLEY

On the Thames it's a Wild Water Regatta. Here's Dave Pogram of Manchester in the Slalom event. They're supposed to dodge the streamers. But Bill Crockett of Chertsey takes a broadside view of - dodging! There's a pretty useful flow of broken water here at Marsh Weir in spite of the heat wave.

Pat Sheldon's going through like an old hand. She probably found needle-threading good practice. Oh! Darn it! ... No, it's all right. It's not Pat. Must have been two other fellows!

ALDERSHOT

At Aldershot they're rehearsing for the combined services display at the Royal Tournament. Don't try this in the sitting room - it isn't as easy as it looks. Try this way - you may break your neck, but look at the chairs you save!

Service gymnasts are one of the star turns at Olympia. The trouble is they make it look so easy - like Corporal Robertsen.

PARIS

At Argenteuil it's the Springtime Grand Prix - the first big motor-cross event of the season. Looks as though they're going up and down the sides of a quarry. It's three-quarters of a mile of hump, bump and general botherment, with half Paris waiting for spills. Looks as though they're going opposite ways, doesn't it? Wouldn't it be fun if they did?

It's the finish now as Henri Frantz of France rounds the last bend to win from Hall and Harold Lines of Britain.
