

POLICE PIPERS AT PALACE

In the grounds of Buckingham Palace, the City of Glasgow Police Pipe Band parades for inspection by the Duke of Edinburgh before leaving on a goodwill tour throughout France.

Formed nearly seventy years ago, this band will give displays of piping and dancing in Paris and many other cities to encourage Frenchmen to visit Bonny Scotland for themselves this summer. Nine times world champions and present holders of the title, these piping policemen can look forward to a great welcome wherever they travel. Now the Duke has said farewell and the band prepares to leave - next stop Paris.

Swinging out through the Palace gates, the pipers bring a welcome splash of colour to London's streets. Don't ask what they're playing. If you want to know the tune ask a policeman!
