

HOME-TOWN FEELS IKE

It's the biggest day in the history of Abilene, Kansas. No need to tell you who's coming home because Abilene's made perfectly sure you won't forget his name. A change of clothes and a change of title (he's just plain "Mister" now) and Ike comes home to fight again, this time for the presidency of his country.

In the true tradition of all presidential elections in America, a big parade is staged in the candidate's honour with scenes of his boyhood re-enacted on decorated vehicles.

Abilene makes it plain to Ike that, as far as they're concerned, there's only one candidate in the race. But even if another should occupy the White House, Britain can be sure that Ike will always be among our stoutest supporters across the Atlantic.
