

No. 1 LONDON

The Duke of Wellington's House at Hyde Park Corner (this is the Waterloo Gallery) London home of the great Iron Duke, is now a National Museum. This is the service which Portugal presented to him for his Peninsular War victories. Ironically he needed steel shutters to protect him from his own people when he was a politician! Here's part of a 400-piece service from Prussia commemorating Waterloo. The great house and mementoes were given by the present duke, who reserves a flat for his own use. The Iron Duke possessed many valuable snuff boxes and was never at a loss for a good baton! His victories saved Europe and shaped the future of the whole world. Today, No. 1 London, the great house given to him by a grateful Britain, is open to all.
