WATERFALL FOR ONE DAY

To supply electric power to a large area in Central Italy, water of a one-time beauty spot has been diverted from its natural course into dams. But for one day each year the gates are opened again and crowds gather at "Le Marmore" Falls, to see them again in their full glory.

The poet Byron was once inspired by the beauty of the Falls, but, until this time next year, it will be harnessed once more to the needs of industry.
