

COBB TESTS THE "CRUSADER"

Britain's new jet-boat "Crusader" takes the water at Loch Ness, watched by her driver, John Cobb, and his wife. The weather's not too bad today, so Cobb gets ready for a trial run.

Already holder of the world's land speed record, he hopes to become the fastest man on water and bring the title back to Britain from America. A speed of two-hundred miles-an-hour is forecast for the "Crusader." But we'll soon see what she can do. Batteries start up her jet-engines.

The water's a bit choppy, but the "Crusader's" already touching the hundred-and-forty mile-an-hour mark.

Just as soon as a few minor adjustments are made to the "Crusader," John Cobb will be having an all-out crack at the world's water speed record.
