

MISS AMERICA

At Atlantic City, New Jersey, fifty-two lovelies from all over the States parade for the finals of this year's "Miss America" contest. Displaying her talents, is Georgia's Jane Langley.

This is judging day and the girls who know all their best angles turn their backs as the judges make up their minds. Which State is going to get the vote? Here's the lovely answer - Georgia, and nineteen-year-old Jane Langley, who's still at college, wins the crown as "Miss America of 1953."

A few miles away the Mrs. America contest proves that cooking or being handy with a needle needn't mean farewell to glamour. Yes, Mrs. America has to be both dazzling and domesticated in every department.

Now the big parade of the wives gets under way. Maybe you can't tell whose legs are whose - but some of the audience have a pretty good idea.

This is your last look before the verdict. Watch what happens when Mrs. Evelyn Schenk is told she's won.

Anyway she wins more than four thousand pounds, the title "Mrs. America" and a kiss from her husband.

AND MRS AMERICA CONTESTS DONALDSON LEDICI

Atlantic City, New Jersey, the annual Miss America Contest draws to a close. Fifty-two lovelies from all over the land display their talents in bidding for the ~~top~~ nation's top beauty title. A google-eyed crowd goes ga-ga over this Georgia peach, nineteen-year-old Neva Jane Langley. This is the Judgement Day and the girls, who know the angles, turn their backs to the judges.

Neva Jane Langley, from Macon, Georgia, is crowned "Miss America of 1953". The college junior who plays a terrific game of softball really makes the Big Leagues.

A few miles away at Asbury Park, the Mrs. America contest proves that a wedding ring does not mean farewell to glamour. Slaving over a hot stove, or being handy with needle and thread may not be essential for their unmarried counterparts at Atlantic City, // nor is this // but MRS America of 1953 has to be domesticated as well as dazzling. In the dazzle department they do allright too.

The MR. to each corresponding MRS. watches proudly and he doesn't need a scorecard to tell who's who.

It's time for decision. Watch the decision's impact!/// The winner, Mrs.
