X On an unnamed airfield somewhere in Korea, Fifth Air Force fighter-bombers get ready for a deadly mission against North Korea Communist targets. Leaflets like these have warned civilians in the target areas of coming bombing attacks, so they may evacuate military objectives in time.

X Now the planes take off and in a matter of minutes are deep into North Korea searching for their objectives. Important roads are blasted by our planes. Then the U.N. airmen seek out military convoys, concealed tanks and villages used for billeting troops.

X Pass after pass is made over the Communist positions as the U.N. steps up the air war in Korea.
