

CONSERVATIVE CONFERENCE

S Scarborough shivers in the cold north wind and we're hoping it's no augury of things to come. For, with the stormy elements, came delegates to the Conservative Conference, hoping for fairer weather than the opposition had at Morecambe.

Ready for any storm comes Mr. Churchill. What he thinks about the outlook he tells to the Mayor. Backing him up as usual, the Foreign Secretary arrives accompanied by his wife. Popular choice in a gallop poll tips him as Mr. Churchill's successor - an opinion evidently shared by the crowd.

In his speech on finance, the Chancellor of the Exchequer refused to court popularity by promising the earth. Mr. Butler revealed the economic facts of life. Times ahead look tough not only for any political party - but for the whole nation.
