Six-and-a-half hours from Calais to Dover. But he'd better not make light of it yet. Now he's got to face more than the waves - he's got to face the London traffic.

In this "man-on-the-move" story, there's a touch of the heroic, as Mrs. Hanning-Lee looks over charts of Windermere with her husband, Frank. Undeterred by recent events, they're still trying - in this their jet-propelled "White Hawk" - to recapture the world's water-speed record for Britain.

So far, they've had trouble with their hydrofoils. To cure that (and get the boat to rise on the water at speed) is their present problem.

A son looks on - while his parents challenge the waters in - this - man's latest offering to the insatiable god - speed!
