

ROYAL GUESTS AT WEDDING

There have been weddings before at the twelfth century Norman church of Shipley in Sussex, but rarely have there been such distinguished guests. The Queen, the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret all came to see Patricia Buller married to Commander Peter Ashmore, equerry to the Queen.

Shipley does not have a village policeman of its own, so half a dozen came over from Horsham to control the thousand local residents.

A pleasant, homely occasion it was, with Her Majesty in blue, the Queen Mother still in black, and Princess Margaret in lilac. It was a day when the village went to town.
