

SHOW TIME

Expert eyes were cast on this model railway at the Model Engineer Exhibition, opened by Prince Philip. His Royal Highness admitted to being something of a small boy himself when models like this were on show. Mothers are advised that it's a harmless place for father to spend an hour or two. It should keep pop really quiet until December when he can lay hands on the Christmas presents he's supposed to have bought for the boys.

At the Model Exhibition you could see how to build a car of your own. That's still almost the only way to get one - as you could see at the other show - the Motor Show. Hard-to-get cars at high-and-mighty prices.

So said these three smart girls in search of a car at Earls Court. With film star abandon Veronica Hurst, Diane Hart and Valerie Garton were out to get a car. The handsome new ArmstrongSiddeley "Sapphire." Could they have one next week? Next year? Next leap year?

The new Wolsley? Now we're very interested. Diane Hart is willing to chip in a third.

Cash down? Sorry ladies, but we can't deliver for a day or two - or a week or two - or even a month or two.

Now here's one they probably could have. A Diamler for Diane, any day. It's got everything - just pay up, drive it away.

But wait, there's some competition. Somebody else got there first. Sir Bernard Docker and Lady Docker. Give that up.

So three disconsolate girls go home - the same old way as usual.
